Congress appropriated about seventy million dollars more this year more than it did last.

Those who voted against the River and Harbor bill can now cordially shake hands with those who voted against the salary-grab bill.

When William T. Price accepted the nomination for Congress in the Eighth district, he gave Congress a rebuke by making a vigorous speech against reckless and extravagant expenditures.

The Tariff Commission is getting along nicely at Long Branch. The hotel accommodations are good, the society the best, the breezes cool (sometimes), the sports fascinating, and each member gets $10 a day and expenses.

The Hon. Artemus Hale died at his home in Brockton, Massachusetts, on Friday, at the age of 99 years, lacking only two months. Thirty-five years ago he was a member of Congress and served two years. He was the oldest ex-member of Congress in the United States.

Lewis Sisley, of Grant county, who was arrested on the charge of murdering his wife, the second night after they were married last June, has been held for trial after examination which lasted one month. He claimed that his wife got out of bed without his knowledge, and went into the woods about a hundred yards distant, and shot herself. But she was found lying straight upon her back, with her arms lying across her breast, and four bullet holes in her body. This created suspicion, and the husband was arrested three or four days afterwards, and after a most thorough examination, the general opinion is that he murdered her. Only a day or two after the murder, and before Sisley was arrested, the murdered woman's father said he received a communication from the spirit world telling him that his daughter had been murdered by her husband. The evidence against Sisley is so circumstantial that the jury may not convict him. It is nevertheless the current opinion that he is guilty.

The venerable Rev. Alfred Brunson, D. D., died at Prairie du Chien, on Wednesday, at the age of 89. In some respects he was one of the most remarkable men in the West. He was born in Connecticut in 1793, and settled in Prairie du Chien in 1836, where his family has since resided. He was the first Methodist minister who ever stepped foot on the soil north of the Wisconsin river. When he came West he found it impossible to rent a house in which to live, and he ordered one framed in Meadville, Pennsylvania, where he had been living, and putting the framed material in a sort of a flat boat, with two families beside his own, he started for Prairie du Chien. The boat was towed by different steamers until he reached his destination, having traveled by water 1,500 miles. He began preaching several years before he came to Wisconsin, and continued in that work for nearly sixty years. He was a member of the Territorial Legislature in 1840, and filled several political offices since that time. He had not done much ministerial work during the past half dozen years or more on account of old age and ill-health. He was a very strong speaker, though not eloquent, and up to the very last preached the old-fashioned doctrines which the more modern pulpit of his own church has practically discarded. He was a vigorous writer on some questions connected with political economy, and for some time after he passed his four score years, he wrote several long and valuable articles for the State Journal on the money question. His life was an exceedingly busy one, and exceptionally pure, and in it were thousands of the hardships incident to an active pioneer life. He was buried by the Masonic fraternity, of which he had been an honored member for nearly half a century.

THE CROPS.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 4.—The continued damp and cloudy weather of the past week, which has been general throughout the Northwest, has given rise to the wild-est reports concerning the amount of damage done. Reports from the most reliable sources, however, reported to the Chamber of Commerce here are that up to the present time the damage actually done amounts to the serious discoloring of the barley crop, which had promised as well in quality and yield, and to a large amount of uncut grain, being more or less badly laid. The winter wheat crop is beyond risks from weather except in the most northerly sections, including Michigan, where they are yet in the midst of harvest. Apart from the weather contingencies yet to be met by spring wheat, there has recently been an increase in local complaints of an unhealthy appearance from rust and other causes. While these reports are not widespread or definite enough to appear very serious, they are sufficient to detract somewhat from the promising outlook generally admitted a few weeks ago.

WATERSPOUT.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 4.—Corning, Wayne County, was overwhelmed by a waterspout yesterday. Business and dwelling houses were swept away. People were rescued with great difficulty. Miles of railroad track were washed away; loaded coal cars were carried off on the flood, and the wires prostrated. The loss to the citizens is $100,000; to the Ohio Central Railroad, $200,000.

Desoto, Aug. 4.—Heavy rains have fallen in most parts of this State during the present week. The result has been floods carrying away bridges, dams, overflowing low land, and damaging if not destroying, each wheat as had been allowed to stand in shock in fields, and of this there is considerable. Young weather is adding to this injury greatly. The floods last night between Iona and Grand Rapids are reported to have done $50,000 damage.

A SHIP MYSTERY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 4.—The British ship Abbie S. Hart, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool, reports that June 27, in 10:30 degrees north 112 west, she passed the hull of a vessel bottom up. The copper looked like American work. Five hours after, another vessel apparently about 1,400 tons, was sighted, also the keel up.

WRECKED TRAIN.

TYRONEVILLE, Pa., Aug. 4.—A terrible accident occurred to-day at noon at Cranberry Coal railway, near Oil City. A large train of freight cars was coming from the mines, and in descending a decline leading to the depot the brakeman lost control of the train, which dashed along at a terrific rate and jumped the track, killing six men and wounding fifteen others. The unfortunate men are of the mining classes.

Never! What, Never! No! Never!!

Never has been a scheme presented in any part of the World, where the system of public or government lotteries has been, or is now legalized and protected, so liberal, in all its features towards the public, as that recently adopted by The Louisiana State Lottery Company, in its Regular Monthly Distributions, under the sole care and management of Gen'l G. T. Beauregard of La., and Jacob A. Early, of Va., on the 2nd Tuesday of each month, all information of which can be had on application to M. A. Danquin, New Orleans, La. For $5 a holder of a successful ticket may get $75,000 or $25,000, etc. Liberty seems here to render the charity of giving (as the Company pays the Chautauq Hospital $1,000 for its franchise) luxury, open gratefully to even the most selfish. The next drawing occurs on Tuesday, August 8, and early callers will be paid soon.

FOUR-LEAVED CLOVER.

"If one find a four-leaf clover
(She said, sitting on the grass)
"He will be lucky,
And that wish shall come to pass."

"Do you say so?" Then, down kneeling
"Mollie, my dear, and great friend,
Looked I for a four-leaf clover,
And my wish to come to pass."

Long I searched among the sorrel,
Close beside me she searched, too;
Broke the silence—but it grew.

For my heart was full of yearning,
And my mouth of eager words,
But I dared not give them utterance—
So I hearkened to the birds:

And kept looking, looking, looking,
While the sun was sinking in the twilight,
Green hills paling into blue.

"Hai have on?" "Yes, and wished for?"
"You and I shall it be?" I cried.
Eyes cast down, she asked, demurely:
"Hai the clover not required?"

MR. PIPER'S PROPOSAL.

"I'll ask her to marry me this very day. To be sure she's young, but it will renew my youth to have her for a wife. I must first speak to her aunt and get her consent. Uncommon fine woman is Miss Marcia. More suited to my age, I dare say, than her pretty niece; but Mollie I love, and Mollie I will marry, if she will have me. Strange that I should be such a fool over a girl at my age! Here I have lived single for fifty years, and have looked forward to spending the rest of my life in the same peaceful manner; but as soon as saw Mollie I forgot all about that. I declare I fell in love with her on the spot! I'm an old fool, but, as I said before, I'll marry her if she will have me."

This conclusion was reached by Mr. Theodore Piper after many hours of anxious thought, during which he had viewed the subject from every standpoint, carefully reasoning away all doubts; for, in spite of the fact that for the first time in his life he was in love, he was not so blind that he could not dimly perceive the folly of his intentions. He had lived a bachelor all his life, feeling no desire to change his condition, when fate, in the person of Miss Mollie Danvers, upset all his placid serenity, scattered to the winds his visions of a peaceful future of single blessedness, and created within him a desire to possess her for a wife.

Mollie Danvers was the orphan niece of Miss Marcia Pardee, who lived in a charming cottage on one of the pleasantest streets of the pretty village of Cherryfield. Upon the death of her widowed sister, fourteen years before my story opens, she took her doubly-orphaned daughter, then a child of four years, to her heart and home. She never regretted her kindness, for with the coming of the bright little fairy to her quiet home came also a great source of pleasure into her lonely life, and she often found herself wondering what she should do without the mischievous child, who was at once the pride and torment of her existence.

Thus life flowed on, calmly and uneventfully, for ten years, till Mollie was fourteen, and Miss Marcia decided that she must go away to school, and receive the advantages of better education than the village academy afforded; and she was forthwith sent to Miss Blanks's select seminary for young ladies, situated in a distant city, to go through a four years' course. During the last year of her absence at the school the population of Cherryfield was increased by the arrival of Mr. Theodore Piper, who purchased a handsome residence next door to Miss Pardee's pretty cottage, and settled down with two or three staid old servants to keep his household affairs in running order. Great was the excitement of the old maid element of the village—Miss Marcia excepted—over his coming, and many were the efforts put forth to attract the attention of the wealthy bachelor, who, however, while polite to all, sedulously refrained from asking any of the anxious fair ones to share his life.

He lived a very quiet life, avoiding society, as he was very bashful, and it was sometime before he overcame his aversion to females sufficiently to be neighborly with Miss Marcia; but, finding, after a while, that she had no designs upon him, and not being so much afraid of the kind-hearted, but somewhat prim, old maid as of the rest of the Cherryfield spinsters, he gradually became quite sociable, and often used to send her fine fruits and vegetables from his own garden. Miss Marcia thought him "a right nice man," and was often beguiled out of her primness as they talked in a neighborly fashion over the garden fence that separated their respective domains, telling him of Mollie, and how proud she was of her.

Thus things went on until the last year of Mollie's stay at school drew to a close. One morning in June, Mr. Piper crossed his garden and presented himself at Miss Pardee's side door with a basket of very fine strawberries. It was opened by that usually serene spinster herself, to all appearances in a state of great excitement, while from the glimpse he obtained of the interior of the cottage he concluded that a revolution of some sort was going on. After receiving the berries and thanking him for them, she said:

"My niece is coming home on Saturday. I have not seen her since her last vacation, a year ago. She has finished school now, and is coming home for good. The house is all upset, but do come in, won't you?"

Fastly declining her invitation, Mr. Piper wended his way toward his domicile in no pleasant mood at the prospect of an addition to his neighbor's small family.

"O dear!" he groaned. "To-day is Tuesday, and she's coming on Saturday. Only one more day of peace and quietness. Of course she's a mighty young thing, who will upset the whole neighborhood with her tautiness. Just us I had got settled and was living quietly, to be tormented so—it is really too bad."

Thus with great apprehension and many misgivings on his part, and much scrubbing, dusting and airing by Miss Marcia, Friday and Saturday passed, and just as the cool summer dusk was falling, Mollie came into the pretty parlor, her aunt stood still and looked at her. Such a change as the last year had made! Such a very pretty Mollie, blue-eyed and dimple-cheeked, with mischief in every flash of the bright eyes, and in every curve of the pretty mouth.

"Well, auntie, what do you think of me? Have I not grown, and am I not a very charming young lady?" said Mollie, with a merry laugh, as she tossed her hat in one direction, gloves and parasol in another, and without waiting for a reply to her question, proceeded to inform her aunt that she was desperately hungry.

She awoke Miss Marcia's hospitality, and bustling around, she soon had Mollie seated at the well-spread table, to whose contents she did ample justice, while her aunt, with unusual volubility, proceeded to enlighten her in regard to Cherryfield affairs, not forgetting to mention Mr. Piper, and say "such a nice man, dear! only very bashful; I know you will like him."

After the repast was finished Mollie bade her aunt good-night and retired, to close her blue eyes in slumber and dream of handsome Jack Morris, to whom she was engaged.

Jack Morris was the only son of Judge Morris, one of Cherryfield's wealthiest and most influential citizens, and he and Mollie had been friends and playmates in childhood. The year before Mollie went away to school Jack was sent to a distant city to study law, and they did not meet again for four years, when, his studies over, Jack came home to spend a few weeks before beginning life as a lawyer. Mollie was home on her annual vacation at the same time, and they met, fell in love, and became engaged with the full consent and approval of the elders. They were to be married as soon as Jack was well established in business, but no one outside of the two families was aware of the existing engagement.

Sunday morning broke, clear and lovely, and Mr. Piper cautiously unclashed his blinds and took a survey of his neighbor's premises. Everything was quiet as usual, so he said to himself: "Goss the young lady is not up yet, or perhaps it being Sunday, she will be quiet. Time enough for her racket yet."

As he gazed, his previously formed prejudice against his fair neighbor vanished, and he was only recalled to himself by the appearance of Miss Marcia calling her niece to breakfast.

From that time Mr. Piper knew no rest until he had called and been introduced to Mollie. He called frequently after that, and the neighbors began to wonder at the change in Mr. Piper. After two or three visits astute Mollie saw how the land lay and resolved upon some fun to while away the tedious weeks until Jack should come to turn Cherryfield into an earthly paradise.

Although as desperately in love as old bachelors are apt to be when they finally do succumb to the charms of some fair one, Mr. Piper was so bashful that he hardly spoke at Mollie, but spent his time during his frequent calls in conversing with her aunt. This just suited Mollie, and the mischievous girl set about deluding her aunt into the belief that Mr. Piper was "courting" her. Miss Marcia would not listen to a word on the subject at first, but as Mr. Piper's visits became more frequent as the days went by, and Mollie never let an opportunity slip to sing his praises and descent upon his apparent devotion to her, that lady was at last forced to believe that he really intended asking her to become his wife.

Great was Mollie's amusement at the many little attempts at personal adornment on the part of her aunt. Miss Marcia was in her youth quite pretty, and even now, at forty-five, few women of her age could boast such thick glossy hair, clear eyes and smooth skin. She seemed to be growing young again.

Two months later there was a quiet wedding at the cottage, and Miss Marcia and Mr. Piper were made one. During the weeks preceding the event Mr. Piper became first reconciled, then satisfied, and finally happy over his prospects for the future. Miss Marcia grew younger and prettier every day, and was so kind, sensible, and in every way suited to him that he never regretted that he had really intended asking her to become his wife.

"I never was so surprised in my life. To think it should turn out so. It serves me right. I, and not auntie, am the one to be laughed at. I'm real glad, though, for Mr. Piper will make her such a splendid husband!"

Neatness in the Highway.

The country highway is the connecting link of the American farmers. It binds the farms together instead of separating them, and furnishes the means by which a neighborhood may be a unit in the nation. The "common road" is a common interest, and is the common expression of a common life. Along it the stranger passes, and from it he gains lasting and very accurate impressions of those who make it what it is.

If a highway was for travel and nothing more, and travel was simply the getting from one place to another, then a good roadbed of the shortest length between connected points would meet the full demands of a country road. But people travel largely for pleasure, and when the going is a duty, they desire to make as much comfort with the commission as is possible. The roadside is the constantly changing panorama of all who pass along any highway.

The writer knows of two equally good roads, so far as the roadbed is concerned, at equal distances from a village. One is kept clean, not expensively so, the grass is cut, and it well pays the owners of the land for their work. The other common road has half-finished ditches along the side, which bristle with Canada thistle and other wild weeds. The fences are hoggerows of filth and propagating beds for noxious plants that each year send down the whole neighborhood with expensive pests. The farmers along this portion of the highway have, with one accord, turned the road into a common "slip-jar" into which they throw everything that is not fit to be seen. In one place is a large brush heap, upon which the trimmings of the trees in the door-yard are annually thrown, and become an object of fright to many a horse that passes by starlight. A little further on the log-yard of a farmer. The roadside is appropriated as a place where the necessary rails are split from year to year. In this brush the turkeys build a nest, and behind the logs a litter of pigs first sees the light of day. Born into the highway, these animals hold all the claims of their birthright. The next farmer has his barn "on the road," and with the tumble-down piles of old lumber, interspersed with broken harrows and cultivators which surround it, the passer by must either shut his eyes, and nose too, or be a witness to a thrifless, and even a disgusting scene. Not far up the road things are even worse, for, instead of the barn, the house is on the public highway, and the carriage track is daily sprinkled with the chips that fly from the slow and melancholy chopper in his boundless wood-yard.

The farmers along the well-kept roadway have no better farms than their shabby neighbors on the other side of the village; they, perhaps, do not make any more money. But there are some things in which they are vastly superior. They live on a higher plane, and therefore a comparison is difficult to make, and not at all necessary. The well-kept road gets all the pleasure driving, no one thinks of going into the unkempt district except on business. The tidy road is a double and mutual comfort to those who desire to take a pleasure drive, and to the farmers who dwell along the highway. Nothing enlivens the common life of the farmer and his family like the sight of frequent vehicles upon the highway.

The difference in the cost of keeping the two extremes of country road is in favor of the one that is neat and pleasing to the eye. There is an increase of hay and a great saving of labor in weeding. The value of the farms, though the same at the outset, are widely different now. Though the fertility of the acres may not be far from the same, the well-kept land is always salable at a good price, while the shiftless farmer must seek a buyer for his land.

But suppose that you cannot have this brick or stone foundation to another the superstructure in. Then I would substitute the next best thing, which would be a timber platform made of some durable timber, buried sufficiently deep in the ground, and covered over with other timbers or plank, and on top of this a sufficient depth of soil to weight it down; and to this sub-earth construction I would connect the sills of the superstructure by means of stone walls, as with the stone walls.

If the proprietor would make this construction as cheap as practicable, and at the same time utilize the part underground as well as the superstructure, let the house be commenced by excavating for a cellar; then lay a set of sills, one on each side, in a trench, their depth below the bottom of the cellar, and outside of the sills of the superstructure two inches; then lathe-board it from the inside of the sill in the ground up past the outside of the sill of the superstructure to the plate, and spike it very thoroughly to the sill at the bottom of the cellar; and in this way get a good cellar until this hoarding and timber-work decay, and with as much or nearly as much security as if the superstructure was bolted to a foundation of stone, and with much less expense. The lower sills being outside the hoarding, and several feet below ground—packing the earth tight outside and on top of the lower sills—the whole structure would be anchored down with all the tenacity and weight of a foot or more of this earth all around the outside of the building. A very little thought on the part of the proprietor will indicate how these lower sills may be still further weighted down by laying plank on timber with one end on top of the lower sill, and the other running four or six feet into the earth outside the building. The laying of these lower sills, in a trench below the bottom of the cellar, is likely to prevent the earth outside from forcing the hoarding and timber-work into the cellar.

Mr. Frank Smith, of M. C. Smith and Son, left for Palmyra, to-day on a visit to his family who are staying there.
The season for the State's Attorney combination, with John Dillon as leading man, will open at the Myer's Opera house on the night of Aug. 22.
Miss Belle Alexander, daughter of Colonel W. D. Alexander, of Topeka, Kansas, is in the city, on a visit to Mrs. D. J. Holmes and daughter.
Roy. J. C. Bergen, a professor at St. Francis Seminary, near Milwaukee, will preach to-morrow morning, at 10:30 o'clock, at St. Mary's church.
The temperance lecture by Dr. Tracy at Canfield's hall, last evening, was well attended, and proved most excellent and instructive entertainment.
The First Methodist Church kindly voted their pastor Roy. D. J. Holmes, a vacation of two Sundays, and he and Mrs. Holmes will leave on Monday for Redfield, Dakota.
Bill Carroll was placed in duration by Marshall Hogan last night for having too much beer stowed away in his anatomy. He was released by Justice Patten on the payment of costs.
Mr. James Mills has returned from his Dakota trip, and is again at his old post in Dr. Palmer's office, freshened for study. Mr. Mills contributes a readable letter in another column.
Harry Anderson's orchestra will accompany the Wisconsin Editorial excursion party on the trip to the Northwest and will play for the party at Hudson, and perhaps other points.
Col. Burr Robbins and Mrs. Robbins, returned from Lake Delavan last night, the Colonel being compelled to forego the pleasures of that delightful resort, to attend to urgent business. He goes on a trip to Kentucky, to-day.
A few persons who have failed to obey instructions and abutted miseries on their premises, will probably rue their neglect, as City Attorney Lyley has determined to vigorously prosecute all cases reported by the health department.
Mr. Sam Nessling has handed us a specimen of the silk badge which will be used by the members of the Wisconsin Pharmaceutical Association who will meet at Oshkosh next Tuesday, and as the badge says, to have "fun with the boys."
We publish on the first page of the Gazette to-day, a batch of dramatic and music notes, which our readers will find interesting. Those who desire to keep informed on the current news of the stage should read these fresh items as they appear from time to time in the Gazette.
Mrs. Knight, mother of Mr. Samuel Knight, the well-known mechanist, died early this morning at her residence on the Afton road near the Blind Asylum. Mrs. Knight was a woman of most estimable character, and her death will prove a source of sorrow to a large circle of friends. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon.
The Germania Society, of Rockford are making extensive preparations for an excursion to Milwaukee on Aug. 29. The Forest City Band will furnish the music, and a stop will be made here for recruits. A grand time is anticipated and the crowd will doubtless be large as the fare from Janesville has been placed at the low figure of $2 for the round trip.
The city engineer, city surveyor and Ald. Cox, made an inspection of the second ward to-day, in the endeavor to decide upon the most feasible plan of turning the water off St. Mary's avenue. The little suffered immediately—depend upon it there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not yell at once that it will regale the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians in the United States. Sold everywhere.
Mother! Mother! Mother!!! Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regale the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief to the child, operating like magic. Miss Belle Alexander, daughter of Colonel W. D. Alexander, of Topeka, Kansas, is in the city, on a visit to Mrs. D. J. Holmes and daughter.

Roy. J. C. Bergen, a professor at St. Francis Seminary, near Milwaukee, will preach to-morrow morning, at 10:30 o'clock, at St. Mary's church.

The temperance lecture by Dr. Tracy at Canfield's hall, last evening, was well attended, and proved most excellent and instructive entertainment.

The First Methodist Church kindly voted their pastor Roy. D. J. Holmes, a vacation of two Sundays, and he and Mrs. Holmes will leave on Monday for Redfield, Dakota.

Bill Carroll was placed in duration by Marshall Hogan last night for having too much beer stowed away in his anatomy. He was released by Justice Patten on the payment of costs.

Mr. James Mills has returned from his Dakota trip, and is again at his old post in Dr. Palmer's office, freshened for study. Mr. Mills contributes a readable letter in another column.

Harry Anderson's orchestra will accompany the Wisconsin Editorial excursion party on the trip to the Northwest and will play for the party at Hudson, and perhaps other points.

Col. Burr Robbins and Mrs. Robbins, returned from Lake Delavan last night, the Colonel being compelled to forego the pleasures of that delightful resort, to attend to urgent business. He goes on a trip to Kentucky, to-day.

A few persons who have failed to obey instructions and abutted miseries on their premises, will probably rue their neglect, as City Attorney Lyley has determined to vigorously prosecute all cases reported by the health department.

Mr. Sam Nessling has handed us a specimen of the silk badge which will be used by the members of the Wisconsin Pharmaceutical Association who will meet at Oshkosh next Tuesday, and as the badge says, to have "fun with the boys."

We publish on the first page of the Gazette to-day, a batch of dramatic and music notes, which our readers will find interesting. Those who desire to keep informed on the current news of the stage should read these fresh items as they appear from time to time in the Gazette.

Mrs. Knight, mother of Mr. Samuel Knight, the well-known mechanist, died early this morning at her residence on the Afton road near the Blind Asylum. Mrs. Knight was a woman of most estimable character, and her death will prove a source of sorrow to a large circle of friends. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon.

The Germania Society, of Rockford are making extensive preparations for an excursion to Milwaukee on Aug. 29. The Forest City Band will furnish the music, and a stop will be made here for recruits. A grand time is anticipated and the crowd will doubtless be large as the fare from Janesville has been placed at the low figure of $2 for the round trip.

The city engineer, city surveyor and Ald. Cox, made an inspection of the second ward to-day, in the endeavor to decide upon the most feasible plan of turning the water off St. Mary's avenue. The little suffered immediately—depend upon it there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not yell at once that it will regale the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians in the United States. Sold everywhere.

the dry portion of the wind, having been scattered with Lake Delavan water during our desperate battle with the wind and waves. We drank to the health of Col. Robbins and that trim and staunch craft the Emma L. Jeffery. May both sail on through life with a fair wind and free sheet, and anchor after a prosperous life voyage in the harbor of eternal happiness.

CAMP LIFE.

Seeking Relaxation and Amusement on the Shores of Lake Delavan.

How the Janesville Pleasure Seekers are Enjoying Themselves.

A Shipwreck.

Lake Laws, Delavan, Aug. 4—My flying vacation has so far been a pleasant one, excepting a four-hours' dismal lay-over at Clinton in the rain, and an excessively lonesome ride on a freight to Delavan. I arrived at Lake Lawn Wednesday night and was welcome received by Colonel Burr Robbins and his estimable wife. Lake Lawn house is crowded, with fun-seeking delegations from Chicago, Rock Island, Janesville and other places. It is immensely superior to any other stopping place here, and is wholly free from the usual annoyances characteristic of summer resort hotels. Every body does as he pleases and is agreeably assisted by the proprietor, Mr. Frank Hawes.

Col. Burr Robbins is a prince, a fact which any one will agree to be indisputable, if they ever met them under similar, or indeed any circumstances. Lake Lawn is a splendid place and just where the visitor to Lake Delavan should go, for undivided personal comfort and a general good time. The fishing is excellent and will be better when Mr. Hawes carries out his plan of baiting the fish.

This trip has more than realized our expectations of pleasure, notwithstanding the rain, and our thanks are gratefully rendered to the courteous ladies and gentlemen at Camp Curtis, to Mr. Hawes, mine host of Lake Lawn, and above all to Col. Robbins and wife.

Frank Humphrey who is happy in the possession of a large farm, and is thoroughly contented with his surroundings. Mr. A. Lawrence and the Buck brothers have extensive farms and good crops. The crop of all small grain is splendid and of the finest quality and presents a beautiful sight, as it is ready for the reaper.

One is astonished to meet the actual number of settlers from Rock Co., and a more social and congenial people can nowhere be found. They are mostly young people, and live happier in their rustic homes than many in palatial residences, surrounded with all that heart can desire and wealth afford.

Ten miles from Aberdeen a colony of 15 young ladies from Minneapolis are located on farms who will remain 6 months to prove up their claims, get a deed, and will be in possession of 160 acres of land that will readily sell for $80 to 1500 dollars.

The land survey can not keep up with the emigration and many are squatting on the government land waiting for the land to come into market.

The emigration to Dakota is wonderful and one can hear no other talk than that which pertains to land.

The summer has been dry, comparatively little rain having fallen. The nights are cool and the atmosphere invigorating and bracing.

Leaving Milwaukee and going by stage 45 miles we find the Sioux Indians located along Yellow Bank Creek. They are quiet and tame enough to make their living. The government furnishes them with ox teams and farm implements and offers them every inducement to their civilization, by building churches and giving them other refining advantages. I was quite impressed with these original owners of the rich vastness, who, shorn of the terror given them by yellow jack literature, are here calm, peaceful tillers of the soil, and worshippers at the same shrine as their conquerors and despilers. They have an educated Indian preacher, and are furnished with an organ which a member of the tribe plays during service, which is always conducted in an exemplary manner. The climate here is salubrious, and everybody has good health. From present appearances this great farm of the world presents little inducement to doctors, but physicians of another class are needed. The number of towns which are springing up demand additional teachers to polish the minds of the young. Mr. J. M. Humphrey who accompanied me on my trip invested, like myself in some land. On our return we were very forcibly impressed with the enterprise and liveliness of Minneapolis, which is a veritable Chicago in miniature. But I am afraid I have trespassed already too much on your space, and will close.

JAMES MILLS

Having just returned from a trip to Dakota, I thought a few descriptive observations on things there might prove interesting to some of your readers, particularly as a great many former residents of this county are now residents of the Territory, and others are contemplating a location there.

The ride from here is a pleasant one, but need not be dwelt upon. About twenty-five miles from the Minnesota State line, we came to the Dakota hills, which extend east and west 25 miles and north and south 100 miles. Going up the hills in a train on an up-grade for 14 miles, is agreeable on account of the novelty, and the necessary slow travel, enhances the agreeableness of the ride, as you are afforded fine opportunities of viewing the scenery and judging of the country. The sight is a pretty one, and even the most prosaic, cannot refrain from entertaining at least a momentary admiration for nature's beauties as seen on the route.

After leaving the hills, the famous James river valley is reached, while for an interminable distance a magnificent prairie stretches out to view. The country is dotted with farm houses, which look like pleasant and inviting oasis in a great desert, here and there showing signs of cultivation in fine fields of wheat. The richness of the soil would be inconceivable to one accustomed to the land at home, which naturally fertile, is inferior to this new El Dorado of farmers, and besides displays the impoverishment of years of tillage.

The town of Aberdeen, a booming place is good evidence of the fact, that other than mining camps may develop with nineteenth century rapidity. Aberdeen a year ago, boasted of but two or three houses, while it is to-day a place of considerable pretensions, and this phenomenal growth is due solely to surrounding agricultural interests. The land office is now in course of erection and will be a large and fine building.
